

Abstract

The present invention provides a novel method for preventing and treating mastitis in mammals and a composition for use in the method to prevent reduction in milk production caused by development of mastitis among livestock such as dairy cows, the invention being based on the finding that mastitis in mammals can be prevented and treated by administering phytase to the mammals.

09581758-061600